

The Local Host Committee of the American Planning Association's 99th
National Planning Conference

Cordially Invites You to...

*An Evening
at the National Constitution Center*

Saturday, April 14, 2007 / 8:00 pm - 10:00 pm

The American Planning Association is coming to Philadelphia this April, with over 5,000 of your fellow local elected officials and Planning Board members from across the country. In conjunction with the conference, we invite you to join us for a private reception at the National Constitution Center on Independence Mall. Established by an Act of Congress, the NCC is located in a spectacular new building that provides panoramic views of the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall. You'll enjoy a private multimedia presentation featuring a live actor, film and video projections, and have access to all of the interactive exhibits that show the significant role the Constitution has played throughout history.

A night at the National Constitution Center will enable you to meet peers from throughout the region and throughout the country, while you enjoy drinks and dessert experiencing a unique national landmark in your own backyard.

We also encourage you to attend the full conference and participate in the variety of sessions. See www.planning.org for the full program and to register.

Reservations are required by April 1. See details below.
